HERBERT OF MUCKRUSS.

HERBERT HENRY ARTHUR, Esq. of Muckruss, co. Kerry, J.P. and D.L., M.P. for that co., late Capt. Coldstream Guards, b. 1840; m. 20 Oct. 1866, Hon. Emily Julia Charlotte Keane, only child of the present Lord Keane, and has, with other issue, a son, HENRY ARTHUR EDWARD KEANE, b. 1867.

Lineage.—The name of Herbert (hay Bert, illustrious Lord) stands so prominent on the records of British history, and has been ennobled, at various times, in so many of its branches, and by so many ancient and renewed creations, that it has become a matter of as much interest as difficulty, in the present day, to ascertain the legitimate and chief stem of this long descended family.

Since the merging of the elder branch of the family of CLIVE, by the marriage of the heiress of the last Herbert, Earl of Powis with the son of the celebrated General Lord Clive, the chieftainship of the name seems indubitably to rest with HERBERT of Muckruss, in co. Kerry, descended from Thomas Herbert, of Kilcuagh, who went to Ireland under the care and patronage of his relative Lord Herbert, of Cherbury and Castle Island, A.D. 1656; which Thomas was the son of Matthew, the son of Sir John, the son of Sir William, the son of Sir Mathew of Colebrook, the lineal descendant from the eldest son of Sir Richard Herbert, of Colebrooke, only brother of the Earl of Pembroke, of the first creation. These brothers (as may be read in the pages of Speed and Holinshed) suffered as Yorkists in the wars of the Roses. The heir general of the Earl of Pembroke married into the family of Somerset, Earl and Marquess of Worcester, and Duke of Beaufort. From Sir Richard descended, in the younger branches, the Lords Herbert, of Cherbury, after Earls of Powis, and Herbert, Earl of Torrington, both extinct in the male line, while from a senior, but never ennobled branch, the family of Muckruss and Kilcuagh now remains the existing and legitimate male representative of the famous name of Herbert.

Lineage.—"There is a tradition," says Dean Swift, "that the most ancient family of the Erricks derive their lineage from Erick, the forester, a great commander, who raised an army to oppose the invasion of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, by whom he was vanquished; but afterwards employed to command that prince's forces, and in his old age retired to his house in Leicestershire, where his family hath continued ever since." Though the earliest ancestor of the family is only recorded by tradition, we learn from ancient writings of unquestionable authority, that the Eyricks were seated, at a very remote period, at Great Stretton, co. Leicester, in that respectable line of life, so justly the pride of an Englishman, free tenants of their own lands, two virgates of which they held under the Abbey of Leicester, on the payment of an annual quit rent to the King of a pound of pepper. These virgates had been given to the Abbey by Ralph Friday, Lord of Wibtoft, and were successively held by Roger Torr, Sir Ralph Neville, Alan and Henry Eyrick, and Robert Eyrick, the son of Alan.

HENRY EYRYK (the above named), was grandfather of ROBERT EYRYK, of Stretton, who, by Joanna his wife, had three sons,

Lineage.—This is an ancient Yorkshire family, deriving their name from their former residence there. In the history of Halifax, co. York, by Rev. ROBERT HOLDSWORTH, LL.D., and 12th Vicar of Halifax. In 1554 he built the chapel on the south side of the church of Halifax as a burial place for himself and his family; he was buried in this chapel, 10 May, 1556, where a monumental tablet records that he was possessor of an estate in Astley, that he was murdered by thieves in the vicarage house, in the great chamber of the north in the lower part of the house, and that he was buried under the great tombstone in the south chapel which he had built at his own proper cost; this monument was erected by

THOMAS HOLDSWORTH, Esq. of Astley, m. Phoebe, dau. of James Oates, of Lanshean, in Northampton; they both lie buried in the church of Halifax, in the same place with Mrs. Mary Holdsworth, dau. of William Midgley, of Halifax, and a monument erected on the south wall records the dates of their deaths and place of sepulture. The next member of the family on record is

JOHN HOLDSWORTH, Esq. of Astley, m. 1575, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Henry Saville, Knt. of Bradley, co. York. The first of the name in Devon is Lineage.—There seems to be no reasonable doubt that the family now resident at Lodsworth held lands there at a very early period, when they occupied the manor-house in the adjoining locality of Ambersham. Ambersham was an extensive manor, comprising all that portion of Hampshire which (about ten miles in length, and half-a-mile in breadth) intersects Sussex from Haslemere to the South Downs, and included other property, viz., the manors of Moore, Hildie, Wintershill, and Copeley. The old moat is clearly distinguishable, but it is believed that the house itself had gone to decay, and in the reign of ELIZABETH the family migrated to Moore, another house on the north side of the river Rother, adjoining Cowdray. Some deeds of exchange between the then owner of Cowdray and the ancestor of the present Mr. Hollist are still in existence. Moore was ultimately sold about 100 years ago.

Mr. Hornold was created by Pope Gregory XVI. a Knight of the first class of the Noble Order of Christ.

Lineage.—The family of Hornold, or, as the name was originally written, de Horningwold and de Horningwold, is of Saxon origin, and has possessed lands in co. Worcester since the 13th century. They also possessed an estate during the 13th and 14th centuries in Horningwold, co. Leicester, sold in 1369 to John de Smythcote; and from this estate probably they derived their name. In 1216, John de Horningwold held lands in Redmarley and Hanley, co. Worcester, and Horningwold, co. Leicester; and in 1309 his descendant, John de Horningwold, was M.P. for Worcester, and in 1315, High Sheriff. Several deeds signed by the latter are extant, and the arms used by him are those now borne by the family. From him descended through several descents,

SIR JOHN HORNOLD, of Standon, co. Hertford, and of Hanley and Redmarley, co. Worcester. He entered his arms at the first Visitation of co. Worcester by Thomas Benholt, Clarenceux King of Arms, in 1533; and of the families then registered therein only five now remain in the co. During the first part of Queen Mary's reign he was Governor of Calais; and later a Knight of Malta, and one of the Commissioners of the Queen to the Pope to arrange as to the Church lands confiscated by her predecessors. On 4 Dec., 1 Mary I., he was appointed Auditor of the Exchequer; and on 24 June, he obtained a grant under the Great Seal from EDWARD VI. of Blackmore Park. He m. Mary Butler, an heiress, cousin to the Earl of Ormonde, and by her (who predeceased him many years) had issue two sons and a dau. His eldest son,

JOHN HORNOLD, Esq. of Blackmore Park, Auditor of Queen ELIZABETH's Exchequer by appointment under her Great Seal; obtained a grant, 1558, under the Great Seal, of the lordship, manor, and estates of Hanley Castle, previously the seat of Lord Clinton and Saye, and of Richard Nevill, Earl of Warwick, attainted for treason. He d. 22 ELIZABETH, leaving, by his wife Katherine, dau. of John Talkerne, Esq. of Talkerne, Cornwall, an only son,

RALPH HORNOLD, Esq. of Hanley Castle and Blackmore Park, who was slain at Gloucester 1583, together with his friend, Sir Anthony Bourne, by the falconer of a gentleman they quarrelled with there. He m. Margaret, dau. of Richard Lygon, Esq. of Madresfield Court, co. Worcester, ancestor of the Earls Beauchamp, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN HORNOLD, Esq. of Blackmore Park and Hanley Castle, a devoted Royalist, who was present in several engagements, and taken prisoner at the siege of Worcester, for which he was fined £3,000. He brought a large troop of horse to the battle of Worcester at his own expense, and putting himself at their head, fought bravely. When the battle was lost, the King, being hard pressed by the Roundheads, Mr. Hornold, together with the Earl of Cleveland, Sir John Pakington, Sir James Hamilton, Capt. Giffard, Col. Careless, and a few troopers, made a desperate charge in the opposite direction, which enabled His Majesty to escape. These devoted men were all slain, excepting Sir J. Pakington, who was captured, and Col. Careless, who made good his escape. Mr. Hornold m. Elizabeth, sister of Lieut.-Gen. Sir William Russell, Bart. of Strensham Court, co. Worcester, Lieut. of the co. for the King, a most eminent Royalist, and by this marriage the representation of this ancient house devolved eventually on the family. He was s. by his son, THOMAS HORNOLD, Esq. of Blackmore Park, who, in a petition, signed and presented by the Earls of Cleveland, Plymouth, and Shrewsbury, and Sir John Pakington, is stated to have been one of the greatest sufferers by the Rebellion. He fought at Worcester, and thence escaped to the Continent, whereupon his demesne was destroyed, the parks of Blackmore and Hanley disarmed, and £4,000 worth of timber cut down to repay the losses of one Alderman Ellyns, of Worcester. All the estates were sequestered, and were only restored in part at the Restoration without compensation. He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Robert Gower, Esq. of Colemirsh Court and Woodhall, co. Family of Gandolfi.

This noble family is one of the greatest antiquity in Italy, and in the 12th century three branches flourished at Verona, Rome, and Genoa, all being descended from Gandolfi, Duke of Bergamo in 525, and his issue, at different times sovereign Dukes and Counts of Bergamo and other towns in Lombardy. This Duke Gandolfi and Duke Zandrulfo of Verona, are said to have been the chiefs of the Lombards who had invaded northern Italy; and both were killed 545 by Agilolfo, Duke of Turin, King of Italy. In 896 Gandulfus was Bishop of Capua. From the 10th to the 14th century the heads of this house were sovereign lords, or principal nobles of Verona. In 978, at the "confirmatio" of the Synod of bishops and nobles held at Pavia, directly after the signature of the legate Bishop Gaulinus, and before that of the imperial legate, is that of "Gandolphus Comes Veronensis." Otho Gandolfi was Count of Verona 1066; and the Counts Guido and Ramirio continually headed the Veronese against the Emperor Frederic Barbarossa. In the middle of the 14th century this house became merged with that of Genoa by marriage. The Roman house, branching off in the 11th century, became extinct in the 13th, but rivalled its head. The Lords Ginetto Otto and Giovanni Gandolfi were "Senatori," or Governors of Rome, 1123, &c., 1232, &c. Existing documents show how, from their stronghold of Castel Gandolfo, or castrum Gandulphis, this family alternately defied the Popes and barons. They were ruined in the Guelph and Ghibelline wars; and by a bull extant in the Capitol, commencing, "We the Lords Pietro and Nicholo Gandolfi, sons of the late Angelo Gandolfi, of the noble and ancient house of Gandolfi," sold their castle to Honorius III. and the Popes, for 1,000 lira. They also sold their castle of Genzano. The Gandolfi, Counts of Kuenburg, in the Tyrol, are said to descend from this branch. The Gandolfi established themselves at Genoa from Verona about 1100, and to the decease, in the middle of the last century, of Antonio, Marquis Gandolfo of Montecresenzio, and Ricaldoni without male issue, have occupied a high position there. The genealogist Bonaroti says, in his MS.: "The Gandolfi are most ancient and noble citizens of Genoa, whose origin, though said by some to be Lombard, by others is thought to be derived from the illustrious Princely house of Ruffo," &c. "It seems most certain that they are properly included among the most ancient and distinguished Genese." Ruffo, Lord de Gandolfo, was Consul 1110, and his son, Otho de Gandolfo-Ruffo, 1119 and 1130; and his grandson, Piccamiglia Gandolfo, in 1157. Count Fulcone Gandolfo signed the peace of Pisa on behalf of the Republic. They were inscribed in the Golden Book by titles obtained from exterior creations and estates; and in 1647, John Charles, Marquis Gandolfi, was invested "with the signs and forms" as Marquis of Ricaldoni and Montecresenzio. They have given to the Roman Church one "beatified," two cardinals, and many bishops.

Lineage.—This family possesses the most unerring proof of antiquity in the title deeds of their estate of Hulton, from which the surname is derived, and of which they have been uninterruptedly lords since the Conquest. The first feudal proprietor on record,

RICHARD DE HULTON, who had a grant of land in Barton, and Edith de Barton, by consent of Gilbert de Norton her husband, which lands Jorveth de Hulton, father of Richard, had some time held of her. To his son and successor, DAVID DE HULTON, Lord of Hulton, his cousin, Robert de Hulton, granted all his lands in Hulton, and William de Ferrers gave all his possessions in Flixton, together with his manor of Hordesdale, by homage and service of two marks of silver four times a-year, and by the 6th part of a knight's fee, viz. 1219. Lineage.—Descended from a common ancestor, two ancient families of the name of Hunter disputed for some centuries the honour of precedence, viz., Hunter of Hunterston, "Praefectus Venatorum Regiorum," in Cuninghame, co. Ayr, the present chief of the house, and HUNTER of Polmoor, Tweeddale, now extinct; but it is noteworthy that the latter house was never styled "of that ilk," a distinction accorded par excellence to the Ayrshire family.

Crawford, the author of the Pecore of Scotland, writing about the commencement of the last century, states the rival houses "are both repute ancient officers of state." "The family of the south is styled Hunter of Polmoor, of whom I have seen nothing; and that in the west is designed Hunter of that ilk, or of Hunterston, whose writs I have very carefully perused. This family, from charters, appears to have had at least a part of the estate they still possess in Cuninghame, while the Morvilles were lords of that country as far back as the reign of ALEXANDER II."

NORMAN ALEXANDER, or HUNTER, living between the years 980 and 1165, and WILLIAM VENATOR, whose name appears s one of the witnesses with Hugh de Morville in an inquisition, A.D. 1116, by DAVID I. (then Prince of Cumberland), of the lands pertaining to the Church of Glasgow, are the earliest of the family on record. They appear to have been amongst those who, passing over to England subsequently to the conquest, went northwards in the train of DAVID I., who had a Maud, a grand-niece of THE CONQUEROR.

NORMAN HUNTER received a grant of certain lands in the arony of Arnel, on the extreme west coast of co. Ayr, which were subsequently distinguished as Arnel Hunter, and which now form part of the estate of Hunterston, and these lands are the only portion of the district which, from its earliest division in the 12th century, have remained unalienated. Fisbet, in his Heraldry, in treating of the antiquity of this family, makes mention of a charter of King ALEXANDER III. "quam in capellâ nostrâ irrevocabile fecimus anno gratiae, 271"), in which a grant of land was conferred upon William Addebie, with the exception of such lands as had been granted to Norman Hunter by King MALCOLM IV. ("excepta terra uoniam Normani Venatoris quod Rex Malcolmus frater Regis Vilmi avi nostri ei dedit"), and this document is likewise referred to in the Haddington Collections. The same author states that, in an ancient charter, Arnel "is bounded with terris Normani Venatoris," which are plainly the lands of Arnel Hunter, which are the lands of Hunterston." They are conferred doubtless on his appointment to the charge of the royal forests in the neighbourhood, an office which the exchequer rolls and other State records prove to have been hereditary, and of which the last mention in a royal charter set forth in a grant by King JAMES V., dated 31 May, 1527, by which the Island of Little Cumbrae is conferred upon Robert Hunter, of Hunterston, and Janet Montgomerie his spouse, and their heirs, "of which island and lands, with pertinents, the said Robert and his predecessors were, in mees past, for us and our predecessors, the hereditary keepers."

ATLMAR DE LA HUNTER, of Arnel Hunter, was one of the Magnates Scotiae who, true to his Norman origin, signed the petitioned submission to EDWARD I., A.D. 1296, and it was for faithful services rendered "that a grant was conferred, D. 1374, by King Robert II., on William Hunter, grandson of Atymar, of certain lands in Arnel, which had been held by Andrew Campbell. The next laird on record,

WILLIAM HUNTER, of Arnel-Hunter, was infeft in his estate prior to 1447, and in 1453 he is named in those records as custos or hereditary keeper of the Forest of the Little Imray. He d. circa 1454, and was s. by his son, WALTER, b. 21 Jan. 1865.

Mr. Joyce claims to represent the eldest branch of this ancient family.

Lineage.—"This old family," says Hardiman in his History of Galway, "is of ancient and honourable English descent, and was allied to the Welch and English Princes. Thomas Joyes, the first of the name that came to Ireland, sailed from Wales in the reign of EDWARD I., and arrived with his fleet at Thomond, in Munster, where he married Onorah O'Brien, dau. of the Chief of that district; from thence, putting to sea, he directed his course to the western part of Connaught, where he acquired considerable tracts of territory, which his posterity still inhabit. While on the voyage his wife was delivered of a son, whom he named MacMara, son of the sea. He extended his father's acquisitions, and from him descended the sept of the Joyces, a race of men remarkable for their extraordinary stature, who for centuries past inhabited the mountainous district of Jar Connaught, called from them "Duthaidh Sheedhoigh," or "Joyce's Country." Walter Jorse, Jorz, or Jorce, brother of Thomas, Cardinal of Sabina, of this name and family, was Archbishop of Armagh; he resigned in 1311, and was succeeded by his brother Roland. The former was Confessor to EDWARD II., and was author of several works. The families of Joyes Grove, in the co. Galway; Oxford, in the co. Mayo; and Woodquay, in the town of Galway, with that of Mervue, near the town, are the present descendants of this old family."

The descent of the family from a remote period is very fully given in MacFibris' "Genealogies," and also in the pedigree of Gregory Joyce, certified 17 Sept. 1709, by Ulster King of Arms (Pedigrees, Ulster's Office, Dublin Castle).

KENNEDY OF BENNANE AND FINNARTS.

KENNEDY, ROWLAND FERGUSSONE, Esq. of Bennane and Finnarts, co. Ayr, b. 1859; s. 1870.

Lineage.—The first of the family mentioned in any charter, Nisbet informs us, is DUNCAN DE CARRICK, and, from the document, it appears that he lived in the reign of MALCOLM IV., which began about 1150. The grandson of Duncan, ROLAND, of Carrick, had a grant of the county of Carrick, from Neil, Earl of Carrick, and was declared Chief of his name. This grant was confirmed by ALEXANDER III.

The sixth in lineal descent from this Roland was SIR JOHN KENNEDY, of Denure. He m. the heiress of Sir Neil Montgomerie, of Cassilis, and had two sons, SIR GILBERT, who succeeded him; and SIR HEW, of Ardstynchar, whom the King of France distinguished for his gallant conduct at the battles of Baugé and Verneuil. Sir Hew d. unm. Sir Gilbert, the elder son, was twice married. By his 1st wife, Marion, dau. of Sir James Sandilands, of Calder, he had two sons, Gilbert, who d. in the French service, without issue; and THOMAS, of Bargany, who s. also to the estates and honours of his uncle, Sir Hew, of Ardstynchar. We find the arms of Kennedy of Bargany emblazoned, in 1859, by Sir David Lindsay, as quartered with the Royal arms of France. From Nisbet, it appears that Sir Gilbert again had, by his 2nd marriage, one son, James, who was preferred to his father's inheritance in consequence of his matching with the Royal Family. By the Princess Mary, dau. of ROBERT III., and widow of the Earl of Angus, he had issue, and his eldest son was created LORD KENNEDY.

The ninth in descent from Thomas Bargany, was HEW KENNEDY, of Bennane, m. his cousin-german, Agnes,
u. of David Fergusson, of Finnarts, and had issue,

SNEYD-KYNNERSLEY OF LOXLEY PARK.

SNEYD-KYNNERSLEY, CLEMENT, Esq. of Loxley Park, and Highfields, co. Stafford, b. 7 Jan. 1859; s. his father 28 Nov. 1876.

Lineage.—According to an old pedigree, "the family of the Kynnersleys is very ancient, being seated long before the Conquest in com. Hereford, in a castle soe called at present. In Doomesday Booke it is recorded, that when the Conqueror was possessed of his new kingdom of England, hee sent his Commis^{rs} throughout y^e remote parts thereof, to know howe every man held his lands. In which time there was an old gentleman that lived and was owner of Kynnersley Castle, in com. Hereford: by name John de Kynnersley, and by title a knight (if any knights were before the Conquest). This old gentleman was blind, he had then living with him twelve sonnes, whom with himself he armed, and stood in his castle gate, his halberd in his hand, attending the coming of sheriffs and other commis^{rs} from y^e king, who being arrived, demanded of him by what tenure he held his castle and lands; y^e old kn^t replied by his armes, showing to them his halberd."

HUGO DE KYNARDSLEYE is mentioned in several charters in the time of HENRY III., and was seised of the manor of Newland and other estates in cos. Gloucester and Hereford. This Hugh is stated to have been a soldier of the Cross, to have accompanied Prince EDWARD to the Holy Land, and to have received the honour of knighthood, upon which occasion he added the Jerusalem crosses to his arms, which were before "Az., a lion rampant arg."

For centuries after, the Kynnersleys of Loxley preserved a male succession, and still continue to be one of the leading families of co. Stafford. The last male representative, CLEMENT KYNERSLEY, Esq. of Loxley (son of Thomas Kynnersley, Esq. of Loxley, an officer R.N., by Penelope his wife, only dau. of John Wheeler, Esq. of Wootton, and grandson of Thomas Kynnersley, Esq. of Loxley, by Barbara his wife, dau. of Sir Gilbert Clarke, of Chilcote), m.
